Q: Windows 8.1 boot error I just bought Windows 8.1 and installed it as a clean installation. When I reboot my PC it says "Windows could not load user32.dll". Windows 7 had the same problem when it loaded up and it took about 24 hours to restart. Any help on what could be causing this or how to fix it?

A: That error is caused by using the "Refresh and Repair" option in the Windows Disk Cleanup tool. In other words, just click the "Refresh and Repair" option on the Start Menu and then it will fix the problem. Hope this helps, good luck!
